Useful Works, No Magic

DR. O. J. FIRESTONE, ECO- yet and the selection of its route nomic adviser to the federal department of trade and commerce, is one of the Government's most distinguished officials. As an economist he is respected not only in Ottawa but in London and Washing-When Dr. Firestone considers the Canadian economy as a whole his conclusions deserve careful

In a recent comprehensive study he surveys the nation's economic progress from 1867 to 1953 and pronounces certain conclusions undoubtedly true but rather embarrassing to certain politicians. Past experience, he says, "should be a warning to those who expect great miracles from an expanding public investment program in a period of declining levels of employment and income." Yet it is just such a miracle that some politicians seem to expect from the simple device of building public

It is perfectly true, of course, as Dr. Firestone says, that government spending has a powerful effect on the economy, a much greater effect than in the early, simple days of Confederation. Yet the proportion of total government spending devoted to public works has been falling steadily. In 1929, for example, 20 per cent of all this spending went to public works; in 1953, only 15

Total government spending has vastly increased, but most of it has gone to services of other sorts, not to works. Apparently the Diefenbaker Government intends to increase the expenditures on works while vastly increasing virtually all other spending at the same time.

It is still not clear, however, how large the works program will be during the present period of business recession. Many of the plans now being started, or considered, will have no important effect on unemployment for a long time to come. They may well begin to employ workers in large numbers only when the recession has ended and the nation faces a shortage of labor

Much is made in politics, for example, of the South Saskatchewan dam project but it will take many months at least to get under way being now only an engineer's incomplete drawing.

Again, the proposed railway to Great Slave Lake is not even a plan can regain full employment.

probably will take all sumi

These major schemes and many smaller ones will not quickly make any dent in the roll of half a million unemployed at the peak of the summer season, if indeed they make any serious dent at all. We must remember that a large proportion of the unemployed are not physically strong men who can work in the construction industry.

To take an obvious instance, how can a railway project on the edge of the Arctic affect an unemployed clerical worker in Montreal, Winni-peg or Victoria? What direct good will the Saskatchewan dam do to unemployed stenographer in Halifax?

The Government does not expect these works to provide full employ-ment directly. It hopes that the activity created, say, at Pine Point or in central Saskatchewan, will fan out widely with large indirect effects. The money earned by the workers employed in construction, the money spent by the construction companies on supplies of all sorts, will irrigate the whole national economy.

That is the hope but even if it is sound its effects will necessarily be Most of the money invested in works, at their early stage, will be needed to maintain the workers already employed and always depen-dent on government spending. The margin over and above these normal works is not large, not yet anyway.

For such reasons Dr. Firestone expects no miracle of recovery from the single device of public works, useful and desirable as they are. The same sort of advice was given in a recent public address here by Dr. J. Fisher, financial adviser to the British Columbia Government and highly distinguished economist. These men are giving professional opinions. They are not interested in And if their advice denies one of the current political myths so much the worse for the politicians,

Mr. Diefenbaker evidently is beginning to understand the truth of such professional opinions. He has greatly changed and almost reversed his former economic think-While rightly determined to do all he can to cure the recession, he agrees that it comes mainly out of the world market and will be cured there. Which means only that we must increase our exports before we

The Hungarian revolution, if it needed one, has now been provided with a myth and a legend; it has been given the focus of one man's death in which the tragic deaths of thousands will be remembered and some day avenged.

Both in the fact of Nagy's death and the manner of it, Russian Communism has betrayed its true nature It has been advertised to the world once more that those who prefer freedom to Communism will pay with their lives if Communism wins the battle. And it has been proved again that Communist "justice" is a thing of secrecy, of harsh con-demnation and furtive execution.

Nagy and those who died with him were not capitalists fighting a hated ideology. They were Communists fighting for a Communist from the mantel piece, as it has Hungary free of Russian domination. Their struggle was national rather than ideological; they claimed merely what every sovereign nation has a right to, regardless of its political complexion. And they received the only answer that Russia makes to such claims - death past, the cries of peace from the Kremlin towers have been punctuated by rifle shots in the cellar. The world, both free and otherwise, cannot mistake their meaning.

How to Meet the People

THE DOWAGER LADY READing, chairman of the British Women's Voluntary Services, has answered a question which must occur to all people wondering what sort of impression important guests receive of the countries they visit.
Currently in the United States, the distinguished British figure says she believes in down-to-earth visits between women of various countries, visits in which they come to know the people and the problems of living with which they cope.

"It's no good floating in and out as a VIP and having orchids pinned on your shoulder," says Lady

Reading.

And how do you avoid that if you are a VIP? The person in question did it prior to the Second World War by travelling in the United States as "Mrs. Read," staying at places where she paid only a dollar a night for a room and by helping with the work in farm families.

That way she got to know the country and the people.

Which provokes the thought that top hats, morning coats and striped trousers must provide a monotonous distinguished visitor vista to any confronted by them.

nothing to the scene.

So was it as the Japanese trainng barque, Nippon Maru, sailed from Victoria on Tuesday morning. There was age-old beauty in the sight, and an age-old call of the sea had brought thousands of Island dwellers down to their shore to enjoy it. Sunday's crowded visiting day aboard the merchant marine training ship had earlier attested to the popularity of this centennial-year feature. It was a happy thought that brought the visitors to our port at this time; and as a goodwill gesture between two Pacific nations it resulted in many pleasant contacts.

As one of the last vessels of her kind in the world, the Nippon Maru held added interest. What once was a common sight on the oceans of the globe has now become a rarity, an event to be long remembered. It will become an even rarer phenomenon as time goes on, and many a jet-age youngster who saw the ship while it was here may never see another. In later life he may recall it as one of the wonders of his youth, and thrill his children as recounts: "I saw a great ship sailing . . .'

LOOSE ENDS

By BRUCE HUTCHISON

Toynbee and the Mice

THIS is the season when book pub-lishers, literary magazines, re-viewers and public libraries pour out nighly moral advice to the vacationist. From a recent issue

Times Book Review complete with an in troductory poem on summer, a solid essay on summer reading and innumerable publishers' advertisements, a foreigner might con-clude that the American family was planto spend

Hutchison vacation with the muse. It has bought a station wagon solely to carry books It has selected a quiet spot where no maddening throng, sound of speedboats will distract it from literature. It may lie in the sun to tan its skin but its real purpose is culture in the good old summertime

SUMMER reading is only a myth, of course, but very good, God-fearing rth American will observe it respectfully, as the skeptical Greek philoso phers paid public homage to gods whom they had privately rejected long ago. Even a profane, uncultured North American like me dutifully carries fifty pounds of books into the woods and treats them with profound reverence.

Nothing, indeed, could be more re-spectiful than the treatment of books in this or any other camp. No one even presumes to open or touch them. They are entaroned, like idols, on a high shelf to be worshipped from a distance.

A work of philosophy, 975 pages of it, and double-sized pages at that, stares frowned these dozen summers among a collection of fish hooks, hammers chisels, fungi on which forgotten chil-

IKE all camp men, I am an enthusi-As has so often happened in the L astic reader and read with hardly any interruption from dawn to dark. But knowing my own limitations, I seldom books so enthusiastically read the books so enthusiastically recommended by the libraries and the literary reviews. There are too many other things to read in the woods, all written in an alphabet unknown to the cultured man, legible only to the rustic, a kind of Basic English more mysterious than the hieroglyphics of ancient Egypt.

In these parts the day's reading begins shortly after daylight when trained reader must be able to decipher a pretty large book, the forest, and carefully selecting his paragraph, must cut down a dead, well-dried tree to fuel a ravenous stove and an insatiable house

BY EIGHT a.m., when the publishers and literary reviewers have hardly opened their eyes, a woodsman has read about a quarter of a cord-enough wood, in fact, to manufacture paper for a thousand books that will never be

That makes a good start on a literary day, but there is a lot more reading to be done. By mid-morning a camp man has usually read the manufacturer's instructions in order to fix a broken pump, or studied the science of combustion to make the chimney draw, or explored the laws of geometry to make a two-foot cupboard fit in a one foot space on the instructions of the housewife, whose mind is the most difficuit of all reading.

BY NIGHTFALL one has read the weather, the principles of carpentry, the mysteries of an internal combustion engine, the theory of Archimedes as applied to a leaky rowboat, the whims of the week-end guest (an unprintable vocabulary) and the human anatomy, which is much more durable than you would think until your muscles have supported a camp.

After all this essential reading. is no leisure for the non-essentials mentioned in the literary reviews. Hence in any well-managed camp you will note that the big, expensive books lugged from town remain immaculate on their shelves while all the paper-back detective stories of crime and violence are stories of crime and violence thumbed and tattered by hard use.

VACATIONIST, rested by his holi-A day, is too tired for anything more demanding than a murder or a comic strip. Exhausted by the serious reading of the outdoors, he retires innocently at dark with Agatha Christie and Hercule Poirot. Professor Toynbee and the Greek philosophers are left solitary on the shelf, year after year, their pages explored only by the cultured mice and the educated ants.

A moment ago, in the interests of much as eight feet into the centre of a literary research. I ventured to open those mighty books and found that the Of course he ought not to have done

DE GAULLE'S PROGRAM

Fuzzy, Vague --- But Hopeful

By C. L. SULZBERGER in the New York Times

GENERAL de Gaulle's pronouncements on Algeria have so far been imprecise and even Delphic. Various parties to that savage dispute can simultaneously read into the Premier's spoken views much that may comfort them, But at the same time they must remain disturbed by his deliberate vagueness.

This, one may assume, is exactly what the General intended. It is too early to set out in detail any surgical plan for kniffing the cancer that eats into France First de Gaulle must tighten his grip on the government and discipline restless elements. This applies especially to an army, still dizzy with the success of its recent experiment in politics, and to Right-Wing extremists, who have discovered the thrill of conspiracy.

Direct Control

De Gaulle implies sympathy with the rogram of Algeria's Europeans who demand "integration" with France. But he never mentions, the word "integration" Liberates in the word "integration". tion." Likewise, he has assumed the min-isterial portfolio for Algeria himself, passing the chain of command on down through the army, which he also controls directly as Defence Minister.

He carefully retrained from rewarding the two most prominent leaders of insurrection that brought him authority again. General Massu and Jacques Soustelle. In his heart de Gaulle does not approve of the formula desired by the colonists. Furthermore, he does comprehend many of the Arabs' aspirations, Therefore he must move with caution.

What he eventually aspires to is ne form of French commonwealth, loosely linking the mother country to an independent "association" of Morocco, Tunisia and Algeria. But he would safeguard certain strategic bases, such as Tunisian Bizerte, which he regards as of rimordial interest" to France.

Suffered Injustice

He has always recognized the real-of the Algerian Moslems' discontent. He acknowledges they suffered injustice under past French administrations. But he finds it hard to compare Algeria, which he likens to a poussiere, or dust heap, with Tunisia and Morocco.

Unlike Algeria, those former colonies had a long history of independent selfrule. And they do not now rely on a large European minority in order to build

De Gaulle's concept of a common-wealth "association" dates back to World War II. These ideas have not yet crystallized. But obviously they tend in another direction from the announced as-pirations of Soustelle and other politicians who hoped to use de Gaulle as a vehicle for arriving at their own objec-

Planted Suspicion

Consequently, even though the Prem-ier expressed himself with glorious ambiguity, he has planted a suspicion in the extremists' minds that they have been deceived. If so, they have only deceived themselves. For the General has not wavered much in his conceptions.

What de Gaulle must now do is to calm down tempers on the Right, while simultaneously seeking to develop ap-proaches to the nationalists. In the latter efforts he is aided by his old friendship with the Moroccan Sultan, who has much influence with the rebels, and by the fact that Tunisia's President Bourguiba and the imprisoned Algerian leader Messali Hadj have in the past publicly expressed desire to parley with de Gaulle. The General has no particular affection for the Arabs. He claims history shows scant evidence of their cultural abilities, that even such splendid contributions as algebra or the creation of Islam's magnificent mosques resulted largely from the talents of captured Christian slaves. But de Gaulle is capable of setting aside these curious personal prejudices in the interest of reality.

Warm Relationship

He sees as reality the need for peace in Algeria and the need for a warm re-lationship between France and its former North African territories. These goals can be realized only after complicated negotiations. And such negotiations must be preceded by the re-establishment of tranquility and an atmosphere in which is possible to replace shooting with

It is against this background that one must view the somewhat fuzzy outline of the Premier's initial Algerian program. So far it isn't really a program all. It is merely a psychological dose, kind of vague tranquilizer. It is designed to dampen the enthusiasm of ex-tremists on both sides and to give hope of peace to the middle-of-the-road majority in both North Africa and France,

The Art of Showing Off

From the Times (London)

"EXHIBITIONISM" is an ugly word, suggestive of psycho-analysis and such solemn horrors. Once upon a time we called it simply "showing off." Today we may think of it with a relenting smile but we did not think so once. It an accusation that we constantly hurled at our contemporaries if, in order to demonstrate their superior information, they answered a question in form which Now that we take a more merciful view we feel a certain sympathy with the gentleman lately fined by a West Country bench for careless driving of his motor cycle. He ate a pastry which he held in one hand while steering his machine with the other. He reminds us pleasantly of Friar Tuck carousing with the Black Knight when "as there were no forks in those days his clutches were instantly in the bowels of the pastry.

Merciful View

The poor fellow was only showing off. He wanted to show how well he could control his motor cycle; the only trouble was that he could not control it quite well enough; with one mouthful it swung as phers and the ants had sampled at least five centuries of world history. The summer reader won't miss them

He brings to mind the motorist charged not long ago with driving with one hand while with the other he encircler a fair passenger's waist. He, if memory serves, "got away with it"; but many will prefer the relatively humble pastry-eater to the ostentatious gallant. The driving of any vehicle gives an opportunity of showing off. The Coachman of the Muggleton Telegraph made a practice of holding whip and reins in one hand, taking off his hat with the other, resting it on his knees, and very leisurely wiping his forehead with his handkerchief "to show the passengers how cool he is."

A famous instance in real life was Sam Hayward of the Wonder, who, according to a recent learned work, galloped his horses up a steep hill at Shrewsbury, turned them in their own length, and drove at a trot into the Lion yard with an inch to spare. That was showing off on the grand scale.

Smaller Scale

On an infinitely smaller scale we have all done it when learning to bicycle. It was a unique moment when we first took our hands off the handle-bars and wob-bled "with supreme dominion." How scornfully we gazed at the still more elementary small boy who had not yet acquired the art! If anyone had then offered us a pastry with what an air would we have devoured it!

There are grown-up braggarts who claim to have peeled and eaten a hard boiled egg while driving a car, but that is surely going too far. They ought to be fined under some anti-litter by-law for spilling their horrid swaggering eggshells on the highway.

As Our Readers See It

Someone to Remember There are only two Englishmen alive today who will be remembered 1,000 years from now. One—the Earl, Lord Bertrand Russell-was the subject for Professor Emery's interesting article on this page a week or so ago. The other, of course, is the great Sir Winston. |

Each of these peerless men has already bequeathed to posterity writings which will survive the Dark Age, upon the threshold of which mankind now staggers. Lord Bertrand Russell's latest book

(if it were read by every so-called Christian) might save mankind from this on-coming advent of a pernicious new Dark Age, It will be found in all good public libraries, under the title "Why I Am Not a Christian," and if I may, I should like to quote just one of the many forceful and well considered opinions from the very intelligent author of that book—"I regard religion as a disease born of fear and as a source of untold misery to the human race." CPR Strike Names without brains are preventing ttlement of Seamen's strike. If brains without names had

Strait Tunnel

To His Worship and the Council I would suggest that the time is op-portune for the construction of an international tunnel from the vicinity of Becher Bay at the south end of Vancouver Island to the vicinity of Angeles Point in the State of Washington—a distance of some 10 miles and thence by road to Highway 101 which is a link with all states of the union.

There is available at both ends of the proposed tunnel, railway and bus con-nections fresh water mains, electric power and light, telephones and paved oads. In Washington is a population of a million within a two hours' drive of Victoria via tunnel.

The Canadian and American govern ments are both on record as desirous of increasing expenditures on public works to combat the present unemployment.
Such expenditure in the west would create a greater benefit as eventually it would seep through many channels to the East and thereby has a greater dis-tribution with the modern machinery for tunnelling. It is simply a matter of setting them to it.

It's so much too much that I'm not going to write a proper column. Instead, I suggest that we take a quiet look

If you know your Victoria, you know Daphne. She's fiftyish or over, not smart or exciting, but with a tremendous sense of humor. She's a Canadian of British stock though I am not sure whether she was born here or came to Canada as an adult, Anyway, that point is unimportant. The important point lies in her stories of her relatives in Britain.

For she still has relatives there, and among them are several who are very, very old. Daphne speaks of them with affection, nusement and genuine admiration.

"My old Aunt Sue," she says, "ninety-seven last December, and, my dear, she's still going just as strong as ever.
"She was knocked down when she was riding her bicycle in the blackout. They left her for dead at the side of the road. Tremendous scalp wounds, broken ribs galore, and both legs fractured in three places.

"But it takes more than that to down Aunt Sue. She's learning Russian now. At 97, mind you. But she says that these days we never know what's going to happen, and a knowledge of Russian might come in very Sometimes, too, Daphne speaks of her Uncle Robert. . He's a mere child, of course, Only 83. But he still plays squash four times nds cycles happile from London down to Brighton.

Daphne's mother had her house blitzed from under her. But, undaunted, she crawled up from the rubble, and now, at 89, she plans to fly out next year to see her grandson in Australia.

Of course, I've laid this on a bit. But these are the sort of stories that you do hear, often, from Victorians of a certain kind.

I come from a weakish family, so I can't match any of them. But my husband's Take his Aunt Julia, for instance. She's a youthful 80, and lives in a charming Dorset village. During the war, she still had her two very old and faithful maids with her. also had several American officers billeted

They were nice men, Aunt Julia said, but. they had some curious ways. And, to illustrate her point, she told us the story of the young American major.

The A.M., it appears, came in very late and very drunk one night. Aunt Julia was waiting for him.

"Major Krinkelmayer," she said, "I'm old hough to know that men do get drunk sometimes. But I must tell you that I cannot have drunkenness here. I'm sure it was a mistake and I'm sure you won't let it happen again.

It wasn't for herself, Aunt Julia told him; it was for the maids. The maids were her responsibility, and she didn't think that they should see that sort of thing!

We never heard what Major Krinkelmayer said. However, after that, he was as good as gold and a perfect gentleman!

Perhaps such stories have no point. But like them. To be himsel substitute though they do make me laugh

Sanity Tests

If I were a judge who had to help decide as to the sanity of a man brought into court, I would not like to take part in the old silly game of listening to the testimonies of three psychiatrists who were paid to say he was sane and three who were paid to say he was the few minutes during which he committed the murder. I would prefer to call in the man's wife, some other near relatives, and close business 'associates, and to ask them if, for a while, he had been behaving queerly. They would not know anything about the only two ques ins that would interest the court, namely, if at the moment when the man committed the crime he knew right from wrong and knew the consequences of his act. No: they would not know anything about those two irrelevant and often unanswerable questions, but they might say to me, "Well, udge; you know he was always a screw-ball nd an odd customer, but here, recently, he has been doing things that were too screwy even for him.". Those three words, "even for hlm," would mean a lot to me.

One big reason why I would like to talk to the family of a man whose sanity was in uestion is because, as any superintendent a mental hospital knows, many of his pa-ents could go into court and behave so anely, and talk so logically that they could convince almost anyone that they were perfectly well, and were being kept in the hos tal by scheming relatives who were after ontrol of their property. Many a time I ery well in my consulting room but on get-ing home wrote me a typically rambling, usive and "crazy" letter.

Often, when I have suspected that my patient was a bit psychotic, and have asked about psychotic relatives, I have been told that the family were all wonderful. But when I talked to the patient's mother or spouse I found that several members were in mental hospitals. I'll never forget a day in office when a sullen and unpleasant looking woman came in to complain of a few convulsions. These were thought to be due to a brain tumor, because she maintained that there was absolutely no epilepsy in her

ODD BALLS

When I quizzed her about this, she quickly became angry and antagonistic. Finally, her husband spoke up and said, "Look, dear, why don't you tell him about those queer spells your Uncle Bill has when he lies down on the ground wherever he is, and curses any-who dares come near him?".

With that, the woman became so angry that she started twitting her husband about a "screwy" sister he had. This, in turn, made him angry; and soon, in the violent quarret that followed, I learned of six people in the woman's immediate family who either were "not quite right" mentally or had queer spells, Study, then, by expert neurologists showed that the woman had no sign of a brain tumor, but she had a typically epileptic electro-

Some years ago a pleasant and rather attractive woman came to see me about some indigestion. She talked about this very intel-ligently, and maintained that it must be due to something terribly wrong in her abdomen. In answer to all my questions, she refused to admit that she was at all nervous. I saw her husband looking at her disapprovingly as she said this; and when she went into the next room, he said, "I am sorry to say this, but I am sure my wife is not sane. She has some queer ideas and she does many queer things. She fights with the neighbors, and she wants me to sue the man next door because 'he is controlling her thoughts with radar!"

Even with this information to help me, it as some time before I could get the slightest bit of information from the woman that would suggest that she was mentally disturbed. In my office she behaved like a sensible, sane and pleasant person.

THE CROWN COLONY OF VANCOUVER ISLAND (1849)

In 1849 Vancouver Island was made a Crown Colony by the British Government, At the same time the Hudson's Bay Company was given all the land of the Island on condition that it bring out colonists, establish settlements, and set up a govern-ment. As the first governor of the new-colony the British Government sent out Richard Blanshard who arrived in March, 1850, only to find that he had no house, no and-aside from the fur traders of the Hud son's Bay Company-no colonists. He is here shown reading to the Hudson's Bay men his Queen's Commission. This was the document given by Queen Victoria appoint-ing him to the office of governor. It can be seen today in the Provincial Archives at Victoria. After the ceremony, Blanshard went back to his cabin on a Royal Navy frigate in the harbor, the only place where he could lodge. By the end of the year Blanshard resigned and returned to Eng-land. James Douglas, the founder of Victoria, was then made governor.

Boiling Rapids Batter Fraser Canoe Brigade

LYTTON, B.C. (CP) - The Fraser Brigade was camped near this small but party-minded Cariboo village today after a trip that definitely shook any obwebs caused by a prolonged tay at Lillooet.

The three canoes ran several choppy but minor rapids with-out incident, then portaged an other pounding, swirling stretch between Lillooet and Lytton, 47 miles apart. The brigade suddenly came upon a vicious stretch in which all three canoes were plunged down into watery crevices, then thrown high and clear of the river by spumes of water boil-ing up from the bottom.

Brigade leader Dick Corless at the time was piloting the 36-foot, 35-horsepower riverboat used as a supply and portage boat. "I was afraid I was going to have to pick up three empty canoes at the bottom," he said

This village of 700 expects several times that many to turn out Friday for the official arrival of the brigade.

The brigade is re-enacting Simon Fraser's epic voyage down the Fraser in 1808.

Chief target of the weekend message will be the weekend skippers. There are 750,000 in Canada, and 4,000 alone in Vietoria, making up what is by far the largest segment of Canada's boatmen, either commercial or pleasure.

Unfortunately, their group also is that with the doubtful honor of having the most accidents, caused by lack of experience and the desire to cram as much sailing or cruising as possible into short periods. Sometimes the weather does not cooperate, sometimes the boat turns on its owner, and sometimes it is just circumstances that gang up for a tragedy.

Overloading is an all too frequent cause of boating accidents, The blame for this rests with the skipper, for he is the one to decide how many persons shall be taken aboard. Boats, particularly outboards produced by conscientious builders, bear safely carry.

Actual loss of life in boating accidents is usually due to lack of life preservers. An amazing number of skippers operate with complete disregard to basic safety and government regulations where life preservs are concerned.

The Canadian Department of Transport regulations require only that a boat of up to 26 feet have one life jacket or life. aving cushion per passenger, and that the boat over 26 feet have one life jacket for each erson aboard.

(Ryne) Duren, New York Yankees' newest bullpen sensation, became the nost ex citing pitcher in major league basebali almost overnight,

Why? How? There are varied reasons given by various people.

Bill Dewitt, former president of St. Louis Browns, who had Duren originally, thinks it's because he has finally curbed his wildness.

The bespectacled Duren be-lieves it was the tutorship of Frank (Lefty) O'Doul at Vanuver in 1956 that is responsible for the metamorphosis.

How well this gamble has paid off is attested by Ryne's record. He has pitched 26 2-3 innings, permitted only 15 hits, struck out 40 men and run percentage of 1.33 doesn't tell half the story. Besides his three victories, he has saved eight games. What has impressed virtually everyone has been his

it all to that "old" psychologist—Birdie Tebbetts.

Newcombe had that new look in a lot of respects Wednesday night. He was pitching in a Cincinnati uniform for the first time, he was working under Tebbetts for the first time, he was working under Tebbetts for the first time, he was working under Tebbetts for the first time, he was working under Tebbetts for the first time, and when it was all over he was a winner for the first time this season following six straight losses with the Dodgers.

Big Newk, traded by the podgers last Sunday, did it with a six-hit 6-1 victory over St. Louis, but he insisted that Tebbetts share his hour of triumph start at 7.30 p.m.

NEW MDE-SIDE PICK SPACIOUS STURDY AND STYLIS

GMC presents the all new WIDE-SIDE pickup ... with beauty to match its brawn!

FEATURES THAT MAKE THE WIDE-SIDE THE MOST PRACTICAL OF ALL GLAMOUR PICKUPS!

Big new choice of power. Standard in all Wide-Side pickups is GMC's famous, use-proven 145 h.p. Thriftmaster 6, or you may choose, as an extra-cost option, the all-new 160 h.p. Trademaster V8.

New Wide-Side pickups are a full six feet wide and give you 50% more cargo area than conventional bodies of similar length-more load space than any other comparable low-priced pickup!

Best of all, you have a choice of two body sizes. Wide-Side pickups come in either 61/2 or 8 feet lengths. Loading heights of both sizes are really low, and tailgates are solidly constructed to support extra-long cargo.

Wide-Side bodies can be fitted with special stake racks for extra-high loads. Stake pockets are sturdily constructed and not only hold stakes securely, but also reinforce the pickup body itself. See them at your GMC dealer's todays Indications were that Turkey too may reject the new plan.

Under the plan announced by Macmillan, Greece and Turkey would be asked to appoint representatives to co-operate with the British governor, now Sir Hugh Foot, during the seven-year period.

An arrangement would be made to allow residents of Cyprus to apply for Greek or Turkish nationality and at the same time retain British nationality.

Two Houses of Representatives would be set up—one for the 400,000 Greek Cypriots and the other for the 100,000 Turkish Cypros.
